PREFATORY NOTE

IN the Explanatory Note in the History of the Parish of Christ Church, published a few years since, it was said, "it is supposed, that in common with many parishes, there has not been such a careful keeping of records and papers as is desirable and proper." Some errors may also have occurred in transcribing from the records, not always clearly deciphered and others made from memory after a lapse of time. A more careful recognition of the duties of rectors and the requirement of papers with written names, before the performance of any clerical function, would prevent many mistakes little in themselves perhaps, but valuable in the future if corrected. This was specially noticed by Mr. George E. Hoadly, long connected with the parish, who soon set himself about correcting these sins of commission and omission. With a wonderful knowledge of the people in the town and the parish, he added a persistency in investigation which was untiring. He has gone through the records of the baptisms, marriages and deaths, correcting errors and supplying omissions; has consulted old newspapers and magazines, visited grave yards for names and dates, and by inquiry and correspondence, has vastly improved the different lists. He has strongly developed the characteristics of an "Old Mortality." The Christ Church records are rendered more valuable by his researches, and I most cordially thank him for what he has done.

It had long been the desire of Mr. Charles J. Hoadly, formerly State Librarian, to carry out the design of placing pinnacles upon the Church building. The original drawings were found and under the superintendence of Mr. George Keller, the work has been satisfactorily completed, and now stands a noble monument to the wishes of those who originally erected it, and to those who have added to it at various times since. The fraternal sympathy of Mr. George E. Hoadley, shows what this old church family has done for Christ Church parish. The cost was over ten thousand dollars. It shows what has been done in preparing a suitable home for the worship of Almighty God. Long may it stand, a source of comfort and happiness, a teacher of divine truth.

The omissions and correction, in the text, are printed in italics. Mr. Frank Farnsworth Starr has aided in correcting and arranging the several parts.

As before, in the case of the History of the Parish, the same generous hand has furnished the means for this publication.

HISTORICAL NOTES.

On pages 42 to 46 of the "History of the Parish of Christ Church, Hartford," mention is made of the troubles the early Churchmen of Hartford experienced in their attempts to purchase land on which to erect a church building. The following, taken from the newspapers of the time and the Court records, give a full account of the affair.

In the New London Gazette for March 20, 1772, we find:

"At the Desire of a Number of our Customers, the following Account of a remarkable Cause lately tried in Hartford, is inserted in this Paper.

"In the year 1760 on the application of about 50 members of the church of England, settled in and near Hartford, the missionaries stationed nearest to that place, began and have since continued to visit them. In the year 1762, at a meeting, about 45 members voted to begin a church, to buy half an acre of land of £80 value, and appointed a committee to purchase the land, take in the subscriptions for the pious uses intended and begin the work. The committee, as such, bought the land, took a deed for it, and at the expence of £120, laid a stone foundation of 60 feet by 45, and 18 feet square for a steeple. Thus it lay for some time, till one of the committee being under difficulties for want of money, sold the said land and foundation, applying the money to his own use. The purchaser sold the premises to another (whose ancestor was one of those who fled to this howling wilderness to shun episcopal tyranny and sacriligious persecution.) The second purchaser having occasion to build himself a dwelling house, (in which he now lives) for the foundation on which it is erected, he appropriated the stones which had been laid for the aforesaid sacred foundation: Thus for the present, by force of liberty—episcopal dissenters (in that place) were crushed in the bud, and being poor, discouraged, and 'in perill amongst false brethren,' the matter rested for some time. At last a few despised episcopal dissenters, brought an action against the last mentioned purchaser, to recover the seisin and possession of the land, and damages for removing the foundation forfeited. In January, 1772, the cause came to trial before the honourable superior court sitting at Hartford. The cause was well argued by two able attorneys on each side (Mr. Hillhouse and Root for the plaintiff; Enderlin and Hosmer for the Defendant.) Except that one of the latter ventured to remark the stolid pretence equally senseless ungrateful and arrogant, that in the New England colonies, the members of the Church of England are dissenters.

"The Chief Judge (the Honourable Mr. Griswold) deliver'd the cause to the jury, with a charge so sensible and clear, a spirit of such candour and catholicism, and a manner so polite, as did honour to the cause and his exalted station.

"The Jury soon return'd with a verdict for the plaintiffs—£35 damage and their costs—which verdict was accepted by the court:—to the great mortification of the defendants."

Resention Granted January 17th 1772"

The following description is believed to have been written by the Rev. Nathaniel Sheldon Wheaton, then Rector of the Parish.

"CHRIST CHURCH, HARTFORD."

"The foundation of this solid and beautiful structure was commenced in the autumn of 1827.

"On the 13th day of May, 1828, the corner stone was laid by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Brownell, in the presence of a large concourse of people. From that time, the work was steadily carried on, until the 22nd day of December, 1829, when it was consecrated by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Jackson of New York, in the absence of the Bishop of the Diocese, on his Episcopal visitation to the West.

"The following description of the edifice may be relied on for its accuracy; although the writer is conscious how imperfect an idea can be conveyed of any specimen of architecture by mere description, unaccompanied by drawings.

"The church, as far as it is finished, presents a faithful example of the ECCLIASTICAL STYLE; and bears a general resemblance to that modification of it which prevailed in England, in the time of the last Henrys. No particular building has been adopted as a model; but the details are almost all copied after drawings of the most approved specimens in England. The peculiar characteristics of the style are very closely adhered to in every part: the utmost pains having been taken to avoid those unseemly admixtures, which characterize most of the attempts at Gothic architecture in this country.

"The main building is a parallelogram, 100 feet in length, by 70 in breadth, independently of the buttresses. These project three feet on each side, and at the ends, giving an area of 106 feet by 76, covered by the building. Its extreme length, including the tower, is 121½ feet.

"The tower is 22½ feet square, fortified with double buttresses at the angles, and stands out 14½ feet from the wall. It rests on a broad foundation of solid mason work, deeply sunk in the ground, to form an adequate support for the weight it was designed to sustain.

"The east end of the church presents three entrances; one through the tower, and the others into the vestibules, opening into the side aisles. The doors of the latter are deeply panelled, and finished above with tracery terminating in crocketed finials, having a light and graceful effect. The jambs are channelled with deep mouldings; and the space between the arch and the window is ornamented with spandrels, together with rich panels and tracery, the latter copied, with some slight variations, from those in Tattershall Church, Lincolnshire. Over each of the three doors is a window rising to the same height with those on the sides, and enriched at the foot with light battlements.

"The entrance through the tower is by a door 13 feet 9 inches high, by 9 feet 6 inches wide within the stone jambs, which are deeply moulded, and carved into a flattened arch, with spandrels and a label above. The great depth of the door, which is sunk nearly three feet within the surface of the wall, together with the expansion and mouldings of the jambs, give a striking relief to this part of the architecture. The door is composed of narrow panels separated by mouldings in strong relief, woven into tracery under the arch. Above is a window, copied in part, but considerably enriched, from one in the Chapel of Magdalen College, Oxford. The tracery in the window-head, is of the foliated or ramified description, the mullions being split at the spring of the arch, and interlaced, so as to produce a light and pleasing effect. These jambs are also of great depth, and cut into mouldings highly relieved. The space of dead wall above, is broken by tracery in stone, on a panel upwards of twenty feet in height; and above this is a light cornice, enriched with foliage, running round the tower, at the floor of the belfry, about 73 feet from the ground. The projections of the buttresses are here covered with gablets, the coping-stones below being of the usual form. The tower, at present, is finished only to the belfry; but is designed to rise about sixty feet higher, and to be constructed of stone to the top.

"The side view of the building presents five windows, the walls between being strengthened with buttresses, falling in at regular intervals, and terminating at present at the eaves. When finished, they will rise fifteen or twenty feet higher, and be surmounted by crocketed pinnacles. The present cornice of rough stone, will be supplied by an ornamented one; and the walls are intended to receive a battlement surrounding the whole roof.

"The windows are copied from those in St. Mary's Church, Oxford, acknowledged to be one of the most beautiful specimens of the perpendicular style which England affords. Each window is divided into three bays, by mullions rising perpendicularly till they intersect the arch, and exhibiting as much tracery in the window-head as the space can afford, without giving it a heavy appearance. They are about 25 feet in height, and are divided into upper and lower compartments by transoms. The arches are protected by hood-mouldings; and the deep jambs are also enriched with mouldings cut in stone. The windows are glazed with ground glass, in diamond panes, set in lead sashes.

"The walls at the west end are also strengthened with buttresses. The chancel window is about 27 feet in height, and is divided by large mullions, and a transom enriched with battlements. The window-head is a composition from various subjects, designed to obscure the light as little as possible, to give the better effect to the transparency placed over it within. The attic is lighted by a trefoil window placed in the rable, and crowned with a hood-moulding.

"The walls were laid by Messrs. Scranton and Johnson of Derby, and are constructed of the chocolate-colored free stone from the Chatham quarries. The roof is slated, and rests on six trusses put together without mortice or tenon; and is believed to furnish one of the first instances of the application of Mr. Town's patent for bridges, to the support of a roof. In each vestibule is a handsome elliptical stair-case, affording an easy ascent to the gallery. The vestibules are arched with ornamented groined arches, the ceiling of the lower compartment being decorated with a cornice enriched with foliage.

"The dimensions of the audience room are as follows:—length of the nave, 60 feet; length of the side aisles, 76½ feet; breadth from wall to wall, 25½ feet. The ground floor contains 138 pews, and the galleries 56, making in all 194, exclusive of the orchestra. From twelve to thirteen hundred people can be conveniently seated in the church.

"The inner doors opening into the side aisles, are partly copied from one in St. George's Chapel, Windsor; that in the center being a composition. The deep, moulded jambs of the latter, give it a singularly rich appearance, when seen from within. All the doors, both within and without, have their arches finished with a label, or hood-moulding, either resting on corbels, or terminating in a return of the moulding.

"The pulpit, desk, and altar, are situated within the chancel at the west end of the church. The panels on the front of the altar which is richly and heavily moulded, are of the most elaborate description; and were copied together with the general form of the altar, with some variations, from the tomb of Archbishop Kemp, in Canterbury Cathedral. The front of the desk, displays a variety of tracery, and rests on a base ornamented with quarterfoil panels, and deep mouldings, which also break round the altar.

"The pulpit is in the form of a hexagon with unequal sides. The cornice appears to be supported by small buttresses clustered around piers placed at the angles, and at equal distances on the front and sides of the pulpit. The spaces between are filled with tracery and narrow panels, deeply sunk, so as to give a bold relief to the ornaments. The trimmings of the desk and pulpit, are of purple velvet, edged with face and a deep fringe. The pulpit is designed to receive a canopy; and it is also intended to cover the wall from gallery to gallery, as high as the bottom of the chancel window, with a screen composed of panels and light clusters of colours; the door of the Vestry-room, which is situated in the rear, forming a part of the tracery. The lateness of the season, and the wish of the parish to occupy the church as soon as possible, have prevented the execution of this part of the work.

"On entering the church from the tower, the eye is immediately directed to the splendid transparency covering the whole window over the pulpit. The subject is that of our Saviour's ascension, after a picture of Raphael. The principal figure is surrounded by a wreath of foliage, forming a border in imitation of stained glass. The arch is also filled with a wreath, in the center of which is a chalice richly embossed, and bearing a cross on its front. The figure is represented in the act of rising through the clouds, the edges of which are strongly tinged with light streaming from above. The face is turned upward, the arms are extended, and the whole position is that of one buoyed up in the air at his native element. The effect of this beautiful piece of painting, especially when viewed by the mellow light of a setting sun, is singularly rich and solemn. The window-heads on each side are filled with stained glass of various dyes and figures; and when seen in connection with the transparency between, present a view unvalled perhaps in any church in the country. The transparency is from the pencil of W. Bacon, Esq., London; the stained glass was executed in Boston.

"The church is fluted up with side galleries, and an orchestra over the entrance. The front is ornamented with panels and mouldings wrought into arches, terminating in small curved finials; while the mouldings along the base support a light parapet. The ceiling beneath the galleries, is composed of flattened rampant arches, groined, and resting on corbels next the wall. These arches are enriched with bold, fluted mouldings, their intersections being concealed alternately by a passion-flower and a cluster of oaken leaves in stucco. The arches above, are supported by rows of pillars, standing about fourteen feet from the wall. These are formed of columns clustered around square piers, each column having its capital, from which spring the groined arches over the galleries, resting also on corbels next the wall. The vaulting over the nave, is constructed in a manner, of which, it is believed, there is no example in this country. It springs from a line above the intersection of the transverse arches; and this gives an appearance of lightness and expansion, which could be attained in no other way. A member of the pillar is continued up to the spring of the main arch, which it thus appears to support; at the same time that it relieves the surface of flat wall below the vaulting. The crown moulding of its capital, is continued along from pillar to pillar, forming a cornice which supports a light battlement; and over this rises the main arch, with an extent unbroken, through the whole length of the nave. This is struck from four centres, and rises about twelve feet, and forty-six feet above the floor of the church. Like the groined arches over the galleries, it is traced with a profusion of mouldings of great depth, and enriched where they meet with knots of oak leaves and acorns, and various kinds of foliage, in stucco. In the centre of the vault, are disposed bosses alternately large and small, of wreathed foliage, boldly executed in stucco. The form of these was taken from some very beautiful ones in Westminster Abbey. The largest are upwards of two feet in diameter, and bear in their centre the characters 1837 in black letter, gilt.

"The orchestra is furnished with an organ, of three rows of keys; the case of which is designed in a style admirably corresponding with the architecture of the church. It presents a front fourteen feet broad by about twenty-six feet in height, relieved by four clustered pillars, the shafts from the impost to the capitals being formed of pipes clustered. The capitals are richly carved into foliage, and are surmounted by crocketed turrets. Small pipes and delicate tracery fill up the compartments between the pillars; and over the middle compartment rises an ogee arch, with a finial crocketed in a bold style. The instrument contains 22 stops, and nearly 1,500 pipes. One of the open diapasons is supplied with metal pipes throughout, the largest of which is fourteen feet long, and nine inches and a half in diameter, it being the largest metal pipe, it is said, in the United States. The instrument possesses great power and compass, and is equally remarkable for the richness and mellowness of its tones. It was built by Mr. Henry Erben, of New York, and does the highest credit to the skill of that young and enterprising artist. It is painted of a dark oaken colour, to correspond with the finishing of the interior of the church. The painting and glazing of the building were done by Mr. Gourley, a member of the parish.

"The whole work was executed under the superintendence of Mr. Chamberlain, also a member of the parish; and with a faithfulness and skill which do him the highest honour. No attentions have been spared by the building committee, Messrs. Imlay, Tudor, and Ward, to render the work as perfect as possible. Indeed, the deep foundations and thickness of the walls, strengthened with buttresses in every weak part, and the massive solidity of the structure, seem to insure to it an indeterminate duration, if not assailed by any of those casualties to which all buildings are more or less liable.

"Arise, O God, into thy resting place; thou, and the ark of thy strength. Peace be within thy walls, and plenteousness within thy palaces.

"For my brethren and companion's sake, I will wish thee prosperity.

"Yea, because of the house of the Lord our God, I will seek to do thee good."

(Episcopal Watchman n. Jan'y 9th, 1837, vol. 3, page 337.)

The following is taken from The Church Standard of September 3, 1904.

"A year ago a memorial was completed at Christ Church, Hartford, of which no notice has yet appeared, but which merits some description.

"Christ Church is one of the earliest Gothic churches in America. It was consecrated in 1829, a little after Trinity Church, New Haven—both structures being designed by Ishiel Towne of that city. In the case of Christ Church, however, Mr. Towne based his designs upon some drawings made by the rector, the Rev. Nathanael Sheldon Wheaton, who had just returned from a visit to England. He had made a careful study of York Cathedral and the fruit of this study was a number of suggestions which were embodied in the plans of Christ Church.

"For the time and the place Christ Church was a remarkable edifice. The great square tower, 150 feet in height, is quite in the Gothic spirit and very massively built. The pinnacles and open parapet about the top, are of solidly constructed masonry. The walls of the nave are three feet in thickness. Mr. Wheaton, tradition says, wrought not a little with his own hands upon the work, some of the grotesques upon the upper part of the tower having been carved by him.

"The designs for the nave were not completed, at first, for lack of funds, but the plans were preserved, and a year ago Mr. George E. Hoadly, a lifelong communicant of Christ Church parish, offered to have them carried out in memory of his brother, the late Charles J. Hoadly, LL.D. The result has been the transformation of the familiar "stone box" nave into a beautiful and dignified Gothic building. The cost of the improvements has been upwards of $12,000.

"The following account of the changes has been prepared by Mr. George Keller, of Hartford, the architect under whose supervision they were executed:

"When Mr. George Hoadly engaged me to prepare a design for a memorial to his brother, Dr. Charles Hoadly, his desire was that it should take the form of beautifying the exterior of Christ Church by building decorative pinnacles on top of the old buttresses, and otherwise improving the bare appearance of the upper part of the church where it joins the roof. On carefully examining the exterior and some of the old drawings still in existence, I was struck with the familiar appearance of some of the architectural features of the parapet of the tower and the details shown on the old drawings, and then discovered that the architect had studied the design for the exterior of Christ Church from York Cathedral for the parapet on the tower, and that indicated on the drawings is almost a literal copy of details from York Cathedral, although executed in a rather crude manner.

"With this to guide me, I designed the pinnacles in the style of York Cathedral; but as the old work was of the simplest kind, devoid of any architectural character, it was necessary to introduce an ornamental cornice under the eaves, so as to tie the whole together, but so managed as to seem a part of the original design, that there should be no incongruity between the old and the new work. This also made it necessary to remove a part of the eastern gables on each side of the tower and rebuild it so as to conform to the cornice on the sides and to repeat the flower ornament used in the tower cornice, which is also introduced in the enriched cornice under the eaves between the buttresses. This ornament being nearer the eye than when used on the tower, is treated more richly, and is adorned with different Christian emblems. One of the ornaments also bears the device belonging to the Howley family."

"The church was fortunate in having so accomplished an architectural sculptor to execute the work, as Mr. Albert Entress of Hartford. He worked in the spirit of the mediæval church builders, and in carrying out the design of the architect, embodied his own idea in a thoroughly æsthetic and appropriate manner."

Another notice gives a more detailed account of the additions.

"The improvements contemplated are, briefly told, the carrying out of the architectural plan contemplated when the church edifice was built. Each buttress, now ending at the roof line, is to be surmounted by a carved pinnacle of English Gothic type, like those now topping the church tower. There will be twelve of these pinnacles, five on the north side, five on the south side, and two at the top of the buttresses at the extreme ends of the front. The latter two will be about 20 feet in height above the roof line and the others will be two feet less in height.

"In addition to these, there is to be placed on the cornice to the front gable which is pierced by the central tower, an ornamental carved cornice about four feet wide, finished with rosettes and lines similar to those now carved on the upper section of the tower. The pinnacles will be duplicates in design and nearly so in size of those now on the tower, and they will be constructed of the same brown stone, so that a few years hence there will be no evidence that the new work is not identical in date with the church building."

--Hartford Post, July 11, 1902.

The following notice of the Rev. George H. Clark, D.D., is taken from the Hartford Times of April 2, 1905:

"The Rev. George Henry Clark, D.D., some time rector of Christ church in this city, died on Saturday in the 87th year of his age.

"Dr. Clark was the third in a family of four brothers, all of whom attained distinction in the ministry. The oldest, Thomas March Clark, born in 1812 and graduated at Yale college in 1831, was rector of Christ church from 1850 to 1853, and bishop of Rhode Island from 1854 until his death in 1903, having been for many years the oldest bishop in the Anglican communion and for four years the presiding bishop of the Episcopal church in the United States. The second brother, Rufus Wheelwright Clark, born in 1813 and graduated at Yale in 1838, was for a long time pastor of the First Dutch Reformed church in Albany, and died in 1889; the third, George Henry Clark, was born in Newburyport, Mass., the family home, November 7, 1819, and graduated at Yale in 1843; and the fourth, Samuel Adams Clark, born in 1822, died in 1878, in Elizabeth, N. J., where he had been rector of St. John's church for nearly twenty years. The descent of the family on the father's side was traditionally from Thomas Clark, the first man to step ashore at Plymouth, and certainly from Nathaniel Clark, one of the settlers of Newbury in 1635, whose wife was Elizabeth Soumerley, granddaughter of Edmund Greenleaf (or Penfilleverte), a Huguenot. On the mother's side the descent was from the Rev. John Wheelwright, brother-in-law of Mrs. Anne Hutchinson, the founder of Exeter, N. H., through Colonel John Wheelwright, who did active service in the Indian wars.

"The future bishop, who was first licensed to preach by the Presbyterians, and had officiated at Newburyport in the only society of that denomination in Massachusetts, had been ordained to the ministry of the Episcopal church before the third brother entered college; the latter, George Henry Clark, studied theology at Alexandria and was ordained by Bishop Easton of Massachusetts, February 12, 1846. He soon became rector of All Saints' church, Worcester, Mass., from which parish in 1851 he was called to the rectorship of St. John's church, Savannah, Ga., where he spent several happy years until the approach of the Civil War. In November, 1860, he made an appeal for the preservation of the Union, which was published. In the following year his connection with the parish was severed, and he presently came north, making his residence temporarily at Pittsfield, Mass.; but it was too late to get his library and sermons with other movables through the lines, and they were sold by an agent of the Confederacy as the property of an "alien enemy." In April, 1862, he was invited to officiate in Christ church in this city; and in the following June he was elected rector, succeeding his brother after an interval of two short rectorships. In his letter of acceptance he said that nearly a year had passed since in pain and sorrow he had left a parish with which his relations for eight years had been pleasant, and around which clustered the tenderest and most sacred associations of life, but to which he had no expectation of returning. His first wife, Lucia Blake Washburn, had died before he left Georgia. In October, 1865, he married Mrs. Susan S. Perkins, widow of Henry S. Perkins, of this city, a woman of noble character and great generosity, who died several years ago, and whose death brought a sorrow from which he never recovered. Dr. Clark—he received the degree of doctor of divinity from Trinity college in 1863—continued as rector of Christ church until 1897, when on “account of his ill health and great nervous debility,” he presented his resignation; he declared that his connection with the parish had been exceedingly pleasant, and the parish, having in vain asked him to withdraw his resignation, accepted it with reluctance.

For the thirty-nine remaining years of his life Dr. Clark resided in this city on the corner of Washington and Park streets, devoting himself for the most part to the reading of history and other studies and to the care of his garden. At one time he officiated regularly in St. James's church in West Hartford, and in 1872 he became for awhile a special agent of the Society for the Increase of the Ministry, an institution in which he took great interest, and preached in many places in its behalf. But it is long since Dr. Clark's voice has been heard in church and indeed for some years the state of his health has not allowed him to appear in public. A permanent result of his historical studies remains in his volume on Oliver Cromwell, published in 1892, with illustrations from old paintings and prints, a careful sketch, highly eulogistic of his hero; he also prepared a paper on Cromwell's letters and read it before the Connecticut Historical society, of which he had become a life member in 1864. A characteristic lecture on John Wheelwright was delivered at Trinity college and elsewhere. In the corporation of the college, to which he was elected in 1852, he sat at the time of his death and had been for fourteen years the senior trustee. On the roll of the clergy of the diocese of Connecticut, Dr. Clark was the oldest in date of ordination to the ministry, his place being now taken by the Rev. N. L. Garfield of New Haven; in the order of canonical residence, his name stood eleventh, but it would have been fifth had it not been for delay in securing letters of transfer from Georgia, caused by the suspension of intercourse from 1861 to 1865. His two sons by his first marriage survive him—Charles Washburn Clark, a lawyer of Paris, France, and George Henry Clark, Jr., who is in business in Newark, N. J.

“Dr. Clark, like his brothers, was a man of literary skill and of true, though sometimes unconscious, humor. He had not the pulpit eloquence of the bishop and the Albany pastor; but he wrote and spoke with earnestness, and his conversation was pleasant and profitable. Once, speaking with the writer as to his occupation with his books, he said: ‘I am thankful that I have intellect enough to enjoy reading, and not so much as to make me famous.’ In fact, in his words and his acts he showed his appreciation of the Horatian verse, though in a man of his ability and profession it could not be literally exemplified: ‘Nec vixit male qui natus moriensque felicit.’”

The Rev. Samuel Hart, D.D., D.C.L., has kindly furnished the following sketch:

The Rev. Lindell Winthrop Saltonstall, as his name indicates, was of the most distinguished New England ancestry. He was born in Chicago in 1841, and received his early education in that city. For several years he was engaged in business, but having decided to devote himself to the ministry, under strong convictions of duty, he entered the Virginia Theological Seminary and passed thence to the Cambridge Divinity School, from which he was graduated in 1877, with the degree of Bachelor of Divinity. He was ordained to the Diaconate in Brooklyn, Long Island, on the 27th day of May, 1877, by Bishop Littlejohn, and to the Priesthood in the following year by Bishop Benjamin H. Paddock of Massachusetts. His first parish, and in fact his only parish before he came to Hartford, was that of St. Mary's Church, Dorchester, Mass., which he served for thirteen years. In October, 1891, he was elected rector of Christ Church, and presently entered upon his duties, in the discharge of which he continued for nearly ten years. He was a man of pleasing personal appearance, a good reader and preacher, and of earnest convictions. In 1892, he married Mrs. Jasper of Boston, and her death after three years cast a lasting shadow over his life. After his resignation in July, 1901, he took a trip abroad for the benefit of his health, which had been seriously impaired; and in the next year, he was for several months in temporary charge of All Saints' Church, Worcester, Mass. He did not enter upon another rectorate, but passed his summers in the south and his winters in Boston and Lakewood, with an occasional visit to Hartford. In May, 1904, while in this city as the guest of Mr. Joseph G. Woodward at the time of a special celebration of the Grand Army of the Republic, having witnessed the parade with much interest on Thursday and dined quietly with a friend on Friday, it was found on Saturday morning the 21st, that he had died in the night; his death was caused by heart disease, with which he had known himself to be affected for some little time; and it had come to him quietly, so that he lay with a peaceful expression on his face. The funeral service was held in Christ Church on the afternoon of the following day (Whitsunday), and the burial was on Monday in Forest Hill Cemetery, near Boston. Mr. Saltonstall was a member of the Society of the Cincinnati and a chaplain of the Military Order of Foreign Wars.

Reverend James Goodwin, eldest child of Rev. Francis and Mary Alsop (Jackson) Goodwin was born in Middletown, Connecticut, February 10, 1865. He was at St. Paul's School, Concord, New Hampshire, from 1878 to 1882. In the latter year he entered Trinity College, graduating with honors in 1886, and was the class poet. In 1889 he was given the degree of M.A. He was at the Sorbonne in Paris in 1886-7, and the General Theological Seminary, New York City, completing the course in 1890, and receiving the degree of S. T. B.

He was ordained to the Diaconate by the Right Rev. John Williams, D.D., LL.D., of the Diocese of Connecticut, in the Church of the Holy Trinity, Middletown, June 4, 1890, and advanced to the Priesthood by the same Prelate in the chapel of St. Luke the Beloved Physician, Middletown, September 24, 1891.

He was Assistant Minister of Calvary Church, New York, from May to October, 1890. He went to England and took a post-graduate course at the University of Oxford in 1890-1. From August 1891 to August 1895 he was Priest in charge of Saint Barnabas Mission, Berlin, New Hampshire.

While at this parish he was married June 13, 1894, to Miss Frances Whitelsey Brown of Hartford, Conn. In August, 1895, he became Rector of the Church of the Good Shepherd, Nashua, N. H., from which he was called to the Rectorate of Christ Church and took charge April 27, 1902.

Record of Baptisms by REV. GEORGE BURGESS, Rector.

Note. The record from November 23, 1833, is in the handwriting of Mr. Burgess. The exact date at which he assumed duty is not apparent. Bishop Brownell and Mr. Wheaton were requested "to take charge of the Parish" on March 17 of that year; on July 27, 1834, Mr. May was requested to go to Providence, to procure the services of Rev. George Loring as an assistant for six months." Probably he came to Hartford in Deacon's orders, soon after this date, and was received as assistant at a date which he was chosen as Rector October 27. The last baptism by Dr. Wheaton was August 31, and by Bishop Brownell October 26. It is fair to suppose that the services of Mr. Burgess commenced November 9; sick, and christened in private.
